

The Essen Health Conference

Where Health meets Labour and Education Economics.

25 – 27 May 2023; Essen, Germany

Invited speakers

Lisa Cameron, University of Melbourne

Orla Doyle, University College Dublin

Mark Hoekstra, Texas A&M University

Jonathan Kolstad, UC Berkeley, Haas School of Business

Essen Health Conference is a forum where researchers in health economics present work on the nexus between health and socioeconomic outcomes. We invite paper submissions on any topic at the intersection between health and labour or education economics.

Examples of suitable topics

- Early life health, education, and productivity
- Retirement and health capacity to work at older ages
- Health insurance and the labour market
- Mental health and employability
- Determinants and effects of absenteeism and presenteeism
- The effects of unemployment and downturns on health
- Structural modeling of labour market decisions and health
- Prescription drug use, mental health, education and labour market outcomes
- The effect of physical and mental health on educational attainment

Papers should be sent in pdf format by 28 February 2023 to contact.conference@ibes.uni-due.de. Contributions from early career researchers are encouraged. There is no registration fee for the conference.